J. W. HAYDEN.

CRAB ORCHARD, Nov. 17.—On a recent occasion, speaking from hearsay (which is not recognized as legal evidence) in a communication, I said that "Crab Orchard was the town where some mighty bad men lived," and was reminded by THE INTERIOR JOURNAL's correspondent at this place that an investigation would prove the assertion incorrect. Well, he was right, and I take it all back, for Crab Orchard is now-a-days as peaceable and the people seemingly as happy as were those wise men of the East while being guided to that ancient and historic city by the brilliant star of Bethlehem. On Sunday last the hitherto absorbing topic, the Presidential election, was given a rest temporarily, as the intelligence had just been received that the count is finished and Cleveland is our next President, and the citizens were deeply interested in the revival at the Baptist church. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Bruce, is assisted in the meeting by Rev. H. T. Daniels, of Richmond, who is an earnest and very interesting as well as an eloquent proclaimer of the gospel. In his sermon Sabbath morning he paid a deserved compliment to Bro. Bruce, and added: "I heard a business man of Stanford say that it does as much good for Bro. Bruce to simply walk along the streets as is accomplished by some preachers in a lengthy discourse, so much confidence has everybody in him." The large number of pretty girls here conclusively proves that Crab Orchard is still doing her part in sustaining the reputation of Kentucky for beautiful women.

A recent cough will almost always yield to the following treatment within two or three days: Mix in a bottle four ounces of glycerine, two ounces of alcohol, two ounces of water, two grains of morphine. Shake well. Dose for an adult, one or two teaspoonfuls every two or three hours. Half this quantity to children from ten to fifteen years. It is not safe to give it to infants or children under ten years.

"Well," said George, "I must go," and then he said good-night with the Emma Abbott attachment thereunto appertaining. "If you must go, you must," replied Linda. "Look at my hair and ruffie." And he ruffled.—[Burlington Hawkeye.]

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a very common attendant. Blind, bleeding and itching piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching and affording a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address the Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piquette, Ohio. Sold by McRoberts & Stage.

Cleveland's Chair of State.
In 1882, when it was known that Grover Cleveland was elected Governor of New York, the democrats of Buffalo presented him a magnificent and unique chair. A description of the chair makes an interesting paragraph. There is a preliminary history. The chair was constructed for the Denver Exposition of 1882. The Commissioners had intended presenting it to President Arthur, but he failed to attend the Exposition, and the chair was offered for sale and purchased by Mr. J. F. DeWitt, of Buffalo.

We copy a description of this Chair of State from the Buffalo Courier of November 7, 1882:
"It is composed of the horns of Texas steers, beautifully polished, forming the feet, arms and back. The horns are set with their bases to the seat, so that the back is formed by two immense horns rising to an apex. The upholstery is in crimson silk plush, and heavy crimson chenille fringe. The tops of the horns are finished with knots of solid gold, one of which bears the inscription: 'Presented by the Buffalo Democratic Club,' and the other 'November 7th, 1882.' A footstool accompanies the chair. It is composed of four highly polished Buffalo horns for feet, a rest of crimson silk velvet."

THE WRONG MAN.—Jones was a practical joker. He is a simple, ordinary joker now. He was in a well-known saloon the other day with his friend Smithers, and had looked several times upon the wine when it was red; that is to say, had taken several beers.

"It's awful good fun," he whispers to Smithers, "to go up to a stranger and hit him a terrible paste in the back, as if you knew him real well, and say, 'How do do Brown?' or something of that kind. Then of course, you say, 'Very sorry; mistaken identity, etc.' It is fun to see 'em wince, though. See me take that little fellow standing over there." Jones had spoken rather louder than he intended, and the "little fellow" overheard him. He was no other than—the celebrated light-weight sparrer. He kept perfectly quiet, however, until Jones struck him, when he turned and let him have one between the eyes. He had proceeded to wipe the floor with him, and when he got through Jones' own mother would not have known him. He is around town again now, but wears a patch over one of his eyes, and says that practical jokes are rather senseless, after all.—[Boston Globe]

Erie county, New York, Gov. Cleveland's county, is one of the strongest Republican counties in the State. It gave Garfield in 1880 a majority of 3,351 votes. The Governor reduced that majority at the late election 1,945 votes. This clearly shows the estimation in which he is held by those who knew him best.

How to Get Married.
At a recent wedding reception in South Carolina, a young lawyer begged leave to offer a new scheme of matrimony, which he believed would be beneficial. We proposed that "one man in the company should be selected as President; that this President should be duly sworn to keep entirely secret all communications that should be forwarded to him in his official department that night, and that each unmarried gentleman and lady should write his or her name on a piece of paper and under the name of the person they wish to marry, then hand it to the President for inspection, and if any gentleman and lady had reciprocally chosen each other, the President was to inform each other, and those who had not been reciprocal in their choice kept entirely secret." After the appointment of the President, communications were accordingly handed up to the chair, and it was found that twelve ladies and gentlemen had made reciprocal choices but whom they had chosen remained in secret to all but themselves and the President. I was passing through the same place a few days ago, and was informed that eleven of the twelve matches had been solemnized, and that the young gentlemen of eight couples of the eleven had declared that their difference was so great, that they certainly should not have addressed their respective wives if the above scheme had not been introduced.—[Charleston News.]

WHAT HURTS MR. CONKLING.—I know that within the last five weeks as members of the House will recollect, an extra strut has characterized the gentleman's bearing. It is not his fault. It is the fault of another. That gifted and satirical writer, Theodore Tilton, of the New York Independent spent some weeks recently in this city. His letters published in that paper embraced, with many serious statements, a little jocular satire, a part of which was the statement that the mantle of the late Winter Davis has fallen upon the member from New York. The gentleman took it seriously, and it has given him strut additional pomposity. The resemblance is great. It is striking. Hyperion to a star, Thersites to Hercules, mud to marble, dunghill to diamond, a singed cat to a Bengal tiger, a whining puppy to a roaring lion. Shade of the mighty Davis, forgive the almost profanation of that jocular satire!—[Mr. Blaine in Congress, April, 1886.]

A countryman in search of a headstone for his mother's grave pitched upon one the stonecutters had prepared for another person. "I like this one," he said. "But," said the other, "that belongs to another man, and has Mrs. Perry's name cut upon it; it wouldn't do for your mother." "Oh, yes it would," said the countryman. "She couldn't read. And, besides," he continued, "Perry was always a favorite name of hers."—[Boston Journal.]

The Home Angel.
A man, says Robert J. Burdette, is among men all day long, hears politics, elab stories, along of the street, boot-black repartee and junior clerk smartness, the ways and sayings and doings of men until he wears it of it all and when he comes home in the evening he wants to see a home angel, with homelights in her face and lovelights in her eyes, deliciously womanly in dress and manner, with a voice as soft as the war of the street is harsh; a voice that is made for coaxing and petting; a face that is dimpled and beautiful browed, so that his heart doth safely trust in her knowing that "she will do him good and not evil all the days of her life," "strength and honor in her clothing," wisdom in her mouth, and "in her tongue the law of kindness," with the beautiful hands that are stretched out to the poor and reach forth to the needy; whose works praise her in the gates, so that her husband, also, who is known in the gate and sitteth among the elders of the land, he praiseth her, because he knows that he owes nine-tenths of his success to such a wife. "Favor is deceitful and beauty is vain," but the brighter qualities of womanhood are fadeless and are even "as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

There is apparently no end to the use of paper. We have recently noticed its employment in making pails, house doors, and other articles of domestic use, and now observe, in an exchange, that a factory in New Jersey is devoted to making counterpanes and pillow-shams from paper. No. 1 Manila is used, two large sheets being gummed together, with small twine between them at intervals of three or four inches which strengthens the paper and keeps it from tearing. Handsome designs are printed on the surface, and they are said to make a very neat ornament for the bed.

A poison republican said last week: "If Cleveland is elected, he will reduce the Goddess of Liberty before six weeks." A democrat retorted: "No matter if he does; he'll tell the truth; he won't say that he married her at Millersburg."—[Bourbon News.]
